An Autumn Bride

Last Wednesday evening Sept. 30 at five o'clock in the St. Peter Evangelical church was the scene of a pretty fall wedding when Miss Ella Lankenau, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lankenau of Frankfort and Richard Oetter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Oetter, were united in marriage. Rev. G. Lambrecht officiating.

The bride was becomingly gowned in a creation of blue chiffon over white satin and carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

The brides maid, Miss Anna Oetter, wore orchid georgette crepe and carried a bouquet of sweet peas.

The groom was attended by Lester Holl of Monee.

After the ceremony, a reception was held in the home of the brides' parents where intimate friends and members of the families were received.

The home was beautifully decorated in blue and white and a four course dinner served.

Mr. and Mrs. Oetter will make their future home in Andros, Ill., where the groom has purchased a garage. Their many friends extend congratulations.

Mildred Runge Is Bride of A. Knickron

Miss Mildred Runge, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Runge and Alvina Knickron, son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Knickron of Green Garden, were united in marriage at the home of the brides' parents, Tuesday afternoon September 29, at 2 o'clock, Rev. G. Lambrecht of St. Peter Evangelical church of Frankfort reading the service.

The bride wore a gown of blue silk canton crepe and was attended by her sister Dorothy who was gowned in tan silk.

The groom was attended by his brother, Osmar.

After the ceremony, dinner was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Knickron will live on the groom's father's farm where they are building a new home.

Colored Colony
Loses Court Case

A motion for a temporary injunction restraining Sheriff Walker, his deputies, A. H. Krusemark, local attorney, and members of the citizens committee of the village of Frankfort from interfering with the sale or possession of land claimed by promoters of a colored colony east of Frankfort, was denied by Judge Hill.

W. D. Heise, attorney for the sheriff, and Mr. Krusemark, appearing in his own behalf, filed a demurrer to the bill for injunction, setting up that the petition was not based upon an allegation of facts but upon conclusions which the defendants contended were not warranted.

The court sustained the demurrer and denied the motion for a temporary restraining order, pointing out the errors in the bill as drawn. G. Van DeSuz, colored attorney for the colony promoters, asked leave to file an amended bill, which was granted, the court giving him 15 days in which to prepare his new petition.

In the same bill asking for an injunction the promoters of Liberia, as they call the proposed colored settlement, claimed they had been damaged to the extent of $100,000 and asked that the court decree that Sheriff Walker and Mr. Krusemark pay to them that amount.

Citizens of Frankfort are opposed to the establishment of a negro colony in that locality and have been fighting the Liberia scheme for months.

Fred Klepper is doing the cabinet and wood work parts for the Production Meter Service Corporation of Chicago. The first sets he made are now being installed in the Government Printing Plant at Washington.

Mr. Klepper's work is frequently spoken of as "Par Excellent" and has a good chance to show off at the Capitol.

There are quite a number of Frankfort people interested in the Production Meter due to the fact they helped to give it a start three years ago. The company has some of the largest institutions in the country using their Production Meter Service.

One of the nearest plants is at Joliet, with the Gerlach Barklow Calendar Company. This company has two Production Meters.

Geo. Lauffer BuysCattle In Chicago

George Lauffer of Mokena purchased a load of feeding steers on the Chicago market last Thursday. These cattle were horned Herefords, in fair stock flesh, averaging 773 lbs. and costing $6.25. The cattle purchasing was done by the Chicago Producers' Commission Association, which is the cooperative commission agency owned and controlled by the live stock producers. This agency has established an enviable record on the Chicago market their purchases running as high as ten carloads per day, in fact, their increase has been so great that they are at the present time employing a special stock and feeder buyer.

Mr. Lauffer is planning to dehorn these cattle and feed them for the late winter market when he feels he will be able to sell them at a good profit, as there is an old adage that "Cattle well bought are half sold."

Lineman Injured

Owen Ziegler, a lineman of the Western Union Telegraph Co., was quite painfully injured last Tuesday. He was working on a pole near Orland when he slipped and in falling a pole tore a deep gash in his right leg above the knee. Dr. A. Ickstadt of Tinley Park was called and dressed the wound. Mr. Ziegler is getting along nicely.

The injured man is a member of a force of linemen engaged in repairing the Western Union lines along the Wabash. They have a special car at Orland where they are boarding.

Miss Bernice Whittaker of Mokena was struck by a truck while crossing Van Buren St., in Chicago one day last week. She escaped serious injury, altho she was somewhat cut and bruised.

Asks States Attorney
To Act In School
Dist. Consolidation

L. G. Bruder of New Lenox township is seeking the aid of States Attorney Rehn, to compel the consolidation of the Marti school district with Mokena school district, following is his letter.

October 5, 1925.

Mr. H. Rehn, States Attorney,
Will County,
Joliet, Illinois.

My Dear Sir:

I want to call your attention to the Rural School located one mile North of Mokena known as the Marti School, School District 160, Frankfort Township, Will County, Illinois.

This district has not maintained a school for over two consecutive years but the children from this district are attending the School in Mokena and their tuition is paid by their district in which they reside.

Last year ten children from school district 160 attended the Mokena school and their tuition was $6.00 per month per pupil or $54 per pupil for 9 months or $540.00 for the 10 pupils. This is all the district had to pay to furnish education for the children residing in the district.

Last Spring I called on the School Trustees of Frankfort Township at their meeting in regard to annexing this district to the Mokena School District 159, but so far no action has been taken. I recently wrote F. G. Blair, Superintendent of public instruction in regard to this matter and his reply to me is as follows:

"I have received your letter of September 1st. When a district has failed to maintain a school for 2 consecutive years, it becomes the duty of the trustees to discontinue the district, without notice or petition, and to annex its territory to some adjacent district or districts. Section 50. This power is mandatory and not discretionary on the part of the trustees of schools. A peremptory writ of mandamus is the proper remedy in a case of this kind, as I understand it."

I am interested in having School District 160 annexed to School District 159, inasmuch as I am a tax payer in that District and the School taxes levied on School District 160 will amount to a great deal more than the tuition that is paid by that District and will reduce the School taxes per capita in School District 159.

There is no reason why I should file a writ of mandamus to compel the School Trustees of Frankfort Township to function and inasmuch as you are the State's Attorney of Will County I am going to ask you if you will be kind enough to take what action may be necessary to compel the Trustees of Frankfort Township to annex School District 160 to School District 159.

Thanking you, I am

Yours very truly,

L. G. Bruder

P. S. I am sending copy of this letter to Mr. Frank Kohlhausen, Secretary of the School Trustees of Frankfort Township.

Parent-Teachers
Asso. for Mokena

On Wednesday evening October 14 at 7:45 at the Mokena Public School will be held a meeting of all the parents and teachers who are interested in the formation of a Parent Teachers Association. It has been felt for some time the need of such an organization but it has only been now that it seems capable of undertaking. The purpose of such an organization is for the furtherment of our schools and for the chance of parents and teachers becoming better acquainted. Come and let us boost for a bigger, broader, and better Mokena through the medium of a strong Parent Teacher's Association.

ENGLISH SERVICES

Announcement is made by Rev. Mr. Hennig, pastor of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Mokena that English services will be held at this church next Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Everyone invited.

5000 Dairymen
Expected to Attend

Dairymen of the Chicago dairy district are going to hold a big mass meeting at Elgin, Saturday of this week commencing at 10 A. M. and continuing all day. The tuberculin test and other matters of vital import will be discussed. Fully 5,000 dairymen are expected to attend his meeting.

The dairy farmers and cattle dealers are much worked up over the tuberculin test which is being demanded by the city Health Department of Chicago of all dairy farmers in the Chicago district. It is understood that dairymen and cattle dealers alike are making a vigorous protest to Health Commissioner Bundeson of Chicago against this test. If this test is enforced it will mean that nearly every dairy farmer in the Chicago district will have to go out of business and this would mean that a few larger dairymen with plenty of money could easily form a trust and milk would be sold in Chicago for 30 or 40 cents a quart.

This test is unfair and it appears that it is aimed to put the small dairyman out of business. If such a thing should happen it might lead to the closing of Bowman Dairy plant at Mokena which would do a great harm to the community as this plant brings much business to Mokena.

'Flying Switch' Causes Wreck

The Rock Island railroad at Mokena was tied up for several hours Wednesday morning due to a wreck. About 1 o'clock in the morning a west bound freight train was switching some milk cars into the Bowman Dairy sidetrack and while making a "flying switch" a freight car jumped the rails as also did the tender of the engine, the trucks being torn out from under. The Blue Island wrecker was called and after working all night the wreck was cleared up. No one was hurt.

Mrs. Ed. Rothenberger Passes On

Mrs. Edward Rothenberger of Orland answered the call of her Master, on October 2nd at 7 a. m. Mrs. Rothenberger nee Mary Marvitz was born in Blue Island, April 30th 1874. On October 27, 1897 she was united in marriage with Edward Rothenberger. The young couple moved onto the farm two and a half miles east of Orland. Shortly thereafter she was confirmed into the Lutheran faith by Rev. Martin. Three children were born of the union, Edna, now Mrs. John Rauch of Tinley Park, Carrie now Mrs. Emil Keuch of Orland and Arthur staying at home.

Mrs. Rothenberger had been in poor health for the past 14 years. About two weeks ago she was taken seriously ill. She attained the age of 51 years, 5 months and two days.

She leaves to mourn her loss her sorrowing husband and children above named, one grand child; one brother, Fred Marvitz, Blue Island; three sisters, Mrs. Alvina McKeney of Chicago, Mrs. Anna Lang of Waukegan, Eureka Groth of Goodings Grove.

Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from Christ Lutheran church, Orland, Rev. W. C. Greve, officiating. The deceased was a member of the Ladies Aid Society of this church for many years.

Mokena Church To Give Bazaar October 15.

The annual bazaar and supper will be given by the Ladies Aid of the St. John Evangelical church at the church parlors in Mokena next Thursday afternoon and evening. There will be a country store, apron, fancy work and other booths. Everyone is invited to attend.

Oak Lawn Notes

OAK LAWN STANDARD SCHOOL District 122.

We mentioned, in last week's issue, our plan for conducting a Modern Health Crusade in our school, District 122. This plan gives a child an opportunity to keep in school a daily record of his health habits. However, as many of these health processes take place at home it is necessary to have co-operation in the home. Parents are therefore kindly asked to assist children in observance of the habits described in the little pamphlets which the pupils take home. No checking on the part of parents is necessary. The results of the Health Crusade Work are physical and moral improvement, and better attendance and deportment at school. The Crusade links school and home in health work.

The Standard Achievement Club of our school had its first meeting last week. Mr. Simmons acted as temporary chairman and the following officers were elected: Wilbert Harnew, President; Henry Schenkel, vice president; Crystal Kluck, secretary; Clarence Woodrich, treasurer.

The third type of speech defect is stuttering. This is found in nervous, highly strung and sensitive children. It is due to lack of proper nervous control. It cannot be controlled by will or power. The harder the patient tries, the worse he stutters. It is not outgrown and it cannot be corrected by punishment. About one person out of every twenty stutters to some extent at some time.

BLOWING AWAY MOSQUITOES

ST. PATRICK drove the snakes out of Ireland. Another Patrick, a fellow countryman, is going to blow the mosquitoes out of Samoa. Probably he thousand years from now he, too, will be regarded as a saint, and with good reason, for mosquitoes are much more dangerous than snakes.

Malaria is one of the scourges of the tropics. It is carried by mosquitoes, so the prevention of the disease requires the destruction of mosquitoes. Millions of dollars have been spent in malaria-infested countries in the last ten years in filling in and draining stagnant pools, oiling the surface of ponds and destroying other mosquito breeding places.

But these methods are slow and expensive, so an Irishman, with the characteristic originality and shrewdness of his race, has worked out a cheap and easy way of disposing of these pests. He is going to take them out to sea and drown them.

III. Paul's Vision (vv. 9-11). His experiences since coming to Europe were very trying. He needed encouragement at this time. It is just like the Lord to come at the close of the servant's greatest need, to note the Lord's words to him.

2. "Speak and Hold Not Thy Peace." The one who has heard the

His promise was believed and its provision became a fact of experience, a matter of conscience, the Spirit of God witnessing with our spirit that our sins had been forgiven for His Name's sake. In like manner we obtain promises by faith all along the Christian way.

It is not enough to ask in prayer, we must learn to take as well. Ask and receive that your joy may be full. There never can be fullness of joy apart from this. A bird may get along by using just one wing but the fullness of bird life demands the use of two wings. A Christian may get along just by asking. There is a certain beneficial reaction even in asking, but the fullness of life in Christ can never be known apart from the faith which not only asks but receives. The faith which transmutes the promises of God into the fact of experience. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith."

CUSHION PARTY AT HICKORY HILLS GOLF CLUB

Each lady of the Hickory Hills Golf Course brought a cushion for the Clubhouse one day last week. Prizes were awarded to those having the prettiest ones. Mrs. Schuer won the first prize, who had a Golf-er with his club and ball worked on black satin with different colored yarns. Mrs. Meister had second prize with a lavender satin pillow. Mrs. Colly, third had a black and gold pillow. Mrs. Conley, fourth, a gold taffeta and Mrs. Quinn, fifth, a tapestry.

They had a parade of the Wooden soldiers, each one imitating a wooden soldier. Miss Florence Dohney won the prize in the parade.

President and Mrs. Henry Berry led the Grand March around the hall. Mr. Ed. Visk, vice president was on the scene as usual, entertaining everyone.

Mr. Scanlan, the chairman of the Social Committee had the Clubhouse beautifully decorated in the fall colors of orange and brown. Crepe paper was draped over the windows and brown leaves were all about the room which was very pleasing.

Hickory Hills is to be complimented on their wonderful dance floor for its smoothness. The music was furnished by their regular orchestra whom all the frequenters know. The next party will be on Halloween night October 31, when a better time is expected to be had so by this comparison everyone is expecting something they have never heard tell of.

The refreshments of coffee, sandwiches and doughnuts, were served by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baedaker of Oak Lawn.

A house warming was given at the home of Mrs. Wm. Hilgendorf by the Lutheran Ladies Aid. Games were played and refreshments were served.

The ladies of the St. Gerald's church have organized a new club and call themselves the Alter Aids. This club meets every two weeks and they have established a limited number of 20 members, although there are only 16 now. The proceeds of this organization are to go for the benefit of the alter. Mrs. Landahl is Treasurer and Mrs. Salher is Secretary. Last Thursday they met at the home of Mrs. Berntha Habas where they played buncos and later refreshments were served. At these parties hand work is given as prizes which creates interest. The next party will be at the home of Mrs. Riley on Thursday Oct. 15.

The regular Buncos party of St. Gerald's church will be given at the church October 22. Everyone is welcome and many hand made prizes will be given.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brandt are the proud parents of an 8 1/2 pound boy. Both baby and mother are doing nicely.

Last week an item appeared in these columns of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. George. It should have read, Mr. and Mrs. George Piper.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baedaker have bought Memsic's house on 52nd Avenue. Mr. Frank Memsic and family are going to California where Mr. Memsic has been transferred.

A report was current that little Leonard McKay who was a patient at Burnside hospital had passed owing to a sign in the Barber shop that it was closed for a few hours due to a funeral in the family. The deceased was a sister-in-law of Mr. McKay's and we are glad to say that little Leonard is home and doing wonderful considering what he has gone through.

A miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mrs. Hazel Jones complimentary to Miss Edna Schultz who will be married Wednesday October 7. The guests were the members of the C. C. C. club and relatives. The house was beautifully decorated in light blue. In the center of the living room a large parasol was hung which was filled with blue crepe petals. As Miss Schultz was seated beneath this parasol unwrapping the many beautiful gifts she received, Mrs. Jones pulled a ribbon which loosed the petals in the parasol and they showered down upon the fair blonde bride making a wonderful contrast and effect.

The davenport table on which the gifts were laid was trimmed with blue and white streamers and a closed parasol in the center was filled with rose petals and a large moline bow topped it off. Refreshments were served carried out in the colored scheme.

WORTH

Several of the ladies from the Worth Community church attended the bazaar given by the Orland M. E. church last week. Their time was limited on account of the train service, but they report having a delicious supper. They also stated that the ladies of Orland had a very good display of merchandise and a good crowd, which are two essential things for the success of a bazaar.

Don't forget the 22nd of October which is the date of the bazaar at the Worth Community Church.

The Sunday Evening Club will hold their annual business meeting on October 18, for the purpose of electing new officers and re-organizing the Club. All of the young people who are interested are especially urged to attend this meeting.

The Worth Sunday School is making wonderful progress. The regular attendance has been doubled in the last year. Miss Minnie Leipstorf, the Superintendent, as well as all of the teachers are working constantly and no doubt they feel gratified to a certain extent to see that their efforts are a last beginning to bear fruit. The future citizens of Worth will have a solid foundation on which to build their future lives.

What Seemed Humorous

Mother was entertaining a caller, when suddenly Dorothy, who had been playing on the floor, yawned prodigiously. "My, what a big yawn for such a little girl!" exclaimed the caller. "Yes," agreed Dorothy, "and the funny part is that I wasn't listening at all to what you were saying!"

IF YOU GET UP NIGHTS YOU'RE OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

Prostate and Bladder Trouble Makes Many Men Feel Twenty Years Older Than They Are.

It is said that fifty per cent of men past forty and many younger ones are victims of prostate trouble.

One of the commonest symptoms of this dangerous disease which saps vitality and makes you old before your time is the necessity of getting up several times a night.

Other symptoms are dull, draggy, aching at the base of the spine, pain in groin, burning sensation of organs, lack of vigor and frequent attacks of the blues.

But there is hope for you, no matter how old your case, from a wonderful new formula. It seemingly brings new health, vigor and freedom from these troubles to both old and young.

This wonderful treatment is known as Walker's Prostate Specific, and is prepared in convenient, pleasant tablet form. All you need do is take one tablet after each meal and the symptoms seem to vanish like magic.

To prove these statements the Walker Institute, 1399 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., generously offers to send a $1 treatment under plain wrapper, postpaid and free of charge to any sufferer who will write for it. It cures you, tell your friends and pay whatever you think is fair, otherwise the loss is ours.

Remember that you are the judge, and you pay nothing now or at any time unless you wish, so send your name today before the introductory offer is withdrawn. It is good for only 10 days and guaranteed in every way. Key No. 1899.

WORTH

Mrs. J. Martin and daughter Mary, returned home after having spent several weeks in Rochester, Minn. Mary is now in St. Francis hospital at Blue Island where she had her tonsils removed. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Last Thursday evening, October, 1st, the Evergay Club met at the Zuidema home. They had originally planned to walk, but Lillian Kaufman came to the rescue with her new Overland Sedan and must admit that Lillian is SOME driver. She took as many as possible the first trip and then came back for the rest of the girls but Hazel Hildebrand and Anna Ferrin happened along in Hazel's Willys, and picked up a couple of the girls and according to Lillian's story, she couldn't locate the other two girls, which were Edna Hosman and Harriet Crandall, and the poor kids had to walk all the way down. Bessie had a lot of good things to eat, however and the girls had good appetites due to the strenuous exercise. The next meeting will be at Mildred Russert's home on October 15th.

MARLEY

A home talent play, entitled "Fun On the Podunk Limited" will be presented to the public by the young People's Club of the Marley church Friday evening Oct. 9th at the Marley church. Musical numbers and readings will also be given. At the close of the program a social hour will be held in the church parlors where refreshments will be served under the auspices of the Marley Woman's Missionary society. The public is invited.

Services at the Marley church will be as follows next Sunday:

Sunday School at 10 A. M.
Morning Worship at 11 A. M.
Evening services at 7:30 P. M., under the auspices of the Young People's Club.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Marley church will hold their regular monthly meeting, Thursday October 15 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ingraham, on the A. M. Storm farm. This will be the first all day meeting for this season and dinner will be served at noon. The October committee will be joint hostesses, namely: Mrs. Fred Blodgett, Mrs. H. H. Sabin, Mrs. Fred Swartz, Mrs. Wm. Moore and Mrs. Fred Ingraham. A program will be given during the afternoon. Everybody is invited to attend these monthly meetings.

Mrs. Chas. Laufer spent a few days this week with her sister, Mrs. Froemke, in Chicago.

The Young People's Club will present their second moving picture show for this season at the Marley church Friday evening, October 16, at 8 o'clock. A two reel comedy entitled, "Romeo" by the trained monkeys will be shown and the feature picture "Oh You Tony" starring Tom Mix in the famous horse picture. The public is invited.

A company of young people gathered at the home of Miss Agnes L. Haley Saturday night and surprised her in honor of her birthday. They presented her with a large bouquet of American Beauty roses. The evening was spent playing games and music. Refreshments were served at a late hour.

A picnic party was held in Storm Grove Sunday afternoon, to celebrate the 14th birthday of Miss Iva Gillett and Miss Florence Cutler. Games, races and contest formed the amusements. Awards were won by Francis Gillett, Walter Haas, Robert and Burton Gillett. A basket luncheon was served to 15 at four o'clock.

ORLAND

The Rev. E. L. Setterlund received his appointment last week as pastor of the Orland M. E. church and together with his wife and two sons, Gerald and Robert, they are now living in Orland. The household goods will arrive this week and as soon as the family is settled, they will welcome you and try to serve you as best as they can. They ask your assistance in making them acquainted with any strangers in your neighbors or any sickness among the constituency.

The annual bazaar and supper of this church was a big success. From ice cream cones to "grab bag" from fancy work to novelty table, then supper—all seemed to enjoy their share of each attraction. The new pastor and family arrived from Reddick, Ill., in time to attend this annual feast.

Guests were impressed by the effort to please and serve each one. The fine spirit of fellowship was also noted.

There will be no Sunday School or church services next Sunday Oct. 11, as it is Conference Sunday. It is hoped several cars might be driven to Elgin, to hear the fine addresses always due on Conference Sunday.

Thursday the all day meeting of the Guild will be held at the home of Mrs. David Agate.

Choir practise will be held Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Kay. It is time to "tune up" for the new year.

Friday evening the picture entertainment will be, "Garrison's Finish," with Jack Pickford.

The new Conference year begins

October 18. Let us each make a fresh start in being faithful in our attendance and stand by the new pastor as he comes to guide the efforts of the church to serve Orland community.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our heartfelt thanks to our neighbors and friends for the many deeds of kindness and sympathy shown us in the late illness and death of our beloved wife and mother, also for the beautiful floral offerings. THE CANNIBALS

SYNOPSIS.—Living in the small English village of Darbury, old-fashioned and sedate place, Barbara Stockley, daughter of a widowed mother, is soon to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Rochdale, rich and well connected. Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as an aviator, is to be the pilot. At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the cut-and-dried conventions of her small town. They set out, Barbara, her aunt, Croft, and a mechanic. Word in a few days comes to Darbury that the plane is missing and its occupants believed lost. Croft and Barbara, after the wreck of the airplane in a furious storm, reach an apparently uninhabited island in the Pacific ocean. The other two members of the party had perished. The two castaways build a shelter.

Gradually, worn out, she grew calmer; gradually she lost consciousness of her surroundings, falling into a troubled, restless sleep.

The sun had moved round behind the hill and the hut seemed dark and oppressive when, suddenly, her eyes opened. She started up in some alarm. Surely it was not night, and Croft still absent? However automatic and distasteful any companion might become, the awfulness of solitude—as for a moment that contingency swept across her mind—made it desirable beyond all riches.

She ran to the door. To her surprise, it was no longer barricaded. She pushed it open, and drew a breath of relief; for outside it was still broad daylight. The sunshine gleamed in bright patches upon the shore, alternating with long stretches of shadow cast by palms which, singly or in small clumps, dotted the bay. The time, she judged, must be early evening. If Croft had returned and opened the door, where could he be now?

Unsteadily she walked to the water's edge, searching with straining eyes the shore and the distant reef, without result. Nameless dread at her heart, she turned to ascend the slope toward the palm grove, thinking to get from there a clearer view of the wrecked machine.

A movement behind, among the trees, presently caused her to look round quickly. It was unmistakably a footfall; evidently Croft had returned and come to the river. With a sigh of relief, she left the tree and turned inland to greet him.

Then, for a moment, all power seemed to leave her body. She stood rooted to the ground, her lips moving without uttering a sound, her eyes dilated.

About ten feet away, a pair of fierce, restless eyes gazed upon her, fascinated, from a sooty-black face repulsive by its breadth of nose and thickness of lips. The dark, naked form, of medium height and shrewd build, glistened as if fresh from the water; the frizzy black hair clung damply about the ears and forehead.

As he stood watching her, like an animal watching its prey, the coarse lips parted in a slow devilish grin.

With a quick stream of unintelligible words, he sprang forward.

The spell broke. With one shriek of terror, she turned and fled madly down the slope.

The unintelligible muttering ceased. A blood-curdling yell like some wild war-cry pierced the still air, echoing around the bay.

The unearthly strength born of emergency came to Barbara. Everything save the distant hut faded from her sight; time ceased; coherent thought fled from her. Only one instinct reigned—that of the hunted beast to reach its lair. That, once there, defense might prove equally impossible, she never paused to consider. The bare feet drew nether in their hot pursuit; the weird cry again and again resounded over the bay.

Closer he came; she heard his short snorting breathing.

Closer; the warmth of it fanned her neck.

Closer yet, and a hand caught roughly at the sleeve of her blouse, tearing the soft silk to ribbons as she wrenched her arm free.

Closer, and this time the sinewy black fingers grabbed the bare arm itself.

A swift whirling noise smote across her reeling brain; something hurtled past her shoulder.

With a savage snarling groan, her captor fell sprawling upon the ground.

Dazedly she looked around. Springing over crags, scrambling through brushwood, Croft came down the hill behind the hut at break-neck speed.

The native, quickly regaining his feet, cast one glance toward the tall white figure with blazing eyes, dropping to his muddled senses direct from the heavens; then, without a word, he turned swiftly and leapt, with extraordinary rapidity, back toward the palm grove.

Her transient strength oozing away, Barbara staggered forward.

Croft caught her by the arms.

"What the devil made you leave the hut?" he demanded angrily.

All tendency to faint left her. No lash of a whip could so have quickened her bewildered brain. She recoiled in his grasp, gazing up into his face dumfounded. Amid the confusion of her mind his extreme pallor struck her forcibly. His eyes pierced her like flaming steel.

"Hadin't you enough sense to realize this possibility?"

Now was the time to assert herself, she hesitated; searched vainly for a retort; opened her mouth; closed it again. In her weak state circumstances proved too overwhelming. Feeling utterly insignificant, she merely turned her miserable eyes seaward.

"I was only looking—for you," she murmured unsteadily.

Opposition may wear down a man, as a fortress, with time; but helplessness silences all guns. He stood, breathing hard, still grasping her arm, gazing into her face with eyes no longer flashing with anger, but smoldering with something she could not define—something composed of horror and fear.

"G—d!" he muttered at last, in a different tone. "If I had been too late!"

For a moment he stood silent, scanning the vicinity of the palm grove; perceiving no signs of the native, he turned with her toward the hut.

"I rescued most of the wireless and luggage," he said, turning the subject of her thoughts abruptly. "I brought some of our things across, and left the rest on the reef. You were asleep. So I took the wireless up the hill, and fixed up the aerial."

Sinking once more upon the coasts, she watched him carry in their suitcases and—something else.

It was the old tin box of Aunt Dolly's provisions. . . . Tears rose to Barbara's eyes, and her throat contracted; but her companion's presence caused her to wrestle valiantly with the grief stirred up afresh by the sight of this familiar old box. The little homely things are ever those which bring out the full force of loss or tragedy.

Hiding weakness from Croft's eyes, however, was becoming, unconsciously, Barbara's purpose in life just now. Any display of it was, she felt intuitively, abhorrent to him. In silence she watched him unfasten the box, take out the spirit-lamp, reach among the other contents, and abstract a tin of milk.

Presently he brought some steaming milk in a small tin mug. She had often used that mug upon picnics with Aunt Dolly; the sight of it caused another wave of homesickness and loss.

"I can't drink it," she muttered, turning away.

"You must," he replied quietly, seating himself on the ground beside her, his countenance inexorable. She took no notice.

"Come along! Don't be silly, Barbara!"

Quickly she turned and faced him. Then rather too hastily she took the mug; but her hands trembled, and the milk splashed over the edge. He placed his fingers over hers and guided them; and the cool firm touch brought a peculiar sense of calm and security.

"It tasted—queer!" she remarked.

Rising, he returned to the work of unfastening their luggage.

"Your case is unstrapped," he said presently. "Will you unpack it now?"

"Oh—I can't! Not yet," she said wearily.

"Shall I?"

"No! Oh, dear me, no!" She started up in alarm.

"Well, but—don't you want things for the night?"

"No."

He looked at her in mute inquiry.

"You don't suppose," she asked with asperity, "I shall ever—undress in this place?"

As he turned away, she saw the same flash of white teeth in the dim light that she had seen the first time they met.

"I advise you to change, after such a soaking," was his only remark. He stood near the door, as if uncertain, for a few moments, then pushed it open. "I shall have my supper outside."

Good-night!" he added.

There was much sense in his advice; her clothes felt stiff and heavy. Wearily she opened her suitcase, surprised to find most of the contents dry. She hastily undressed and slipped into cool, fresh garments. Throwing on a loose Japanese dressing gown, she lay down again, exhausted. All fears sank into oblivion. . . . She fell into a deep, heavy sleep.

III

The flare of many torches illuminated the midnight darkness in the south of the island. Chimbabohi, the old chief, sat in the leafy council chamber near the entrance of the sacred palm grove, surrounded by his trusted warriors. In the center of the large circle of squatting figures stood Babooma—next in rank to the chief—recounting, in his muttering, sing-song dialect, the strange story which, arousing tragic memories, caused consternation and foreboding in every heart.

When he ceased, Chimbabohi sat silent, pulling his beard with wrinkled dark hands that trembled. An agitated babel broke out all around, fierce native oaths blending with wails of distress.

The chief at last commanded silence and spoke.

"Whence came they, Babooma? Was there no strange canoe floating, like a vast island, upon the lagoon?"

"There was not, O Chief. The white woman appeared in my path as if sprung from the waving palm! The white man—he looked furtively round—'did fall from the skies, sending his bolt before him!' He shivered, stroking his sore shoulder. 'The great white man is a giant, O my Chief! He will not easily be killed.'"

"How great is the tribe? Didst thou not see others, Babooma?"

"None other did I stay to see, O Chief! Perchance they are evil spirits come to haunt the huts where live the ghosts of our slain ones. Or perchance they slay with ball-devils like unto those other evil ones."

The chief sat in deep thought for some moments; then rose and waved his spear.

"The Vow!" he cried. "Let preparations be made, my warriors. When next darkness hides the earth, we will fall upon this white tribe, true to the Vow!"

A confusion of voices resounded, accompanied by many furtive glances into the darkness of the forest; the savage joy of revenge was yet tempered with awe. Memories of the means of warfare adopted by white men caused them to follow their chief in still half-fearful excitement to the sacred palm grove.

Presently the sound of native voices rose once more, singing their Song of Hate.

The man sitting outside the little hut raised his face, inhaling the soft scents, grateful for the refreshing wind. All night he had sat motionless, head hidden in his hands. There was nobody to see, in his haggard features, what Barbara had seen that morning.

Although his eyes had not closed, this solitary vigil, with its forced inaction, had revived and intensified the morning's sufferings. The sense of powerlessness which had attacked Barbara with such violence in the afternoon now attacked him. Again and again he strove to turn his thoughts from the wrecked mass out there upon the reef; from the dark waters and the monsters which infested them, where those friends, strong and full of life not many hours ago, now lay hidden. What awful fate, worse than mere drowning, had been theirs? . . . He strove to restrain his mental agony, dragging his mind away, for down that road madness lay. . . . There were natives, possibly cannibals, upon this island, to be faced sooner or later.

Therein, to his mind, lay hope. For surely they were in touch with civilization? During his travels he had picked up a good number of dialects employed among Polynesian and Melanesian natives. With luck he might find means of rescue through their enterprise, if they had any. But this was doubtful. He knew well the characteristics of the Pacific: knew the trade routes, the ports of call, the features of islands in touch with civilization, the features of many practically unknown. . . . Intercourse with strange natives, too, meant considerable risk, with a woman in his care. . . . At that thought, the same strange thrill shot through his frame which he had experienced in the morning; the awful loneliness of spirit seemed to fall from him.

Scattering his reflections, a strangled, terrified cry came from the hut. He sat up, alert in a moment. All had been quiet hitherto. The draught dropped into the milk had done its work. He had been fortunate in rescuing the case of medicines and first-aid necessities from the machine. Again, louder, another cry smote upon his ears. He sprang to his feet.

Reaction had come upon Barbara, awakening from the heavy effects of the drug, so vividly that she was almost delirious. The little hut seemed to swing round and round, now darting suddenly up toward the sky, now dropping, as a stone, into limitless space. And ever, from the four quarters of the globe, roared what seemed like ten thousand trains. . . . To escape was impossible, for somebody had barricaded the door. . . . the hut rushed down now toward the dark fathomless waters. . . . they closed above her head, and everywhere black hands surrounded her—black leering faces came close. . . . With a shriek of terror she cowered against the wall, when the door opened; then perceiving freedom, she ran blindly toward the starlight without.

A pair of arms caught her upon the threshold. Half-demented she struggled in their hold, gasping hard sobs. But they closed more tightly; and their protective warmth shut out the lurking dangers. Gradually she grew calmer; the nightmare sensations of returning consciousness abated. Ceasing to struggle, she leaned exhausted against him, her arms clinging to one of his, the waves of her long hair falling across his breast.

So for several minutes they remained—two derelict beings hurled, helpless pawns, over the boundary line of civilized life into a world yet in its infancy—each conscious of a sense of comfort in each other's nearness.

Presently he straightened himself. With two fingers he felt her brow and cheek; they were of little more than normal heat. He stroked back the hair clustering over her forehead; and she stirred, raising her head.

"You must lie down again and sleep," he said, drawing her toward the bed of coats. But her grasp tightened upon his arm.

"You are not going—far away? It—it's like a vault in here—full of death—" Her voice rose unnaturally.

"I won't leave you at all," he said hurriedly, but with a decision which obviously relieved her. "It's not safe—for either of us—alone—tonight."

Her eyes wandered over his face, in the dim starlight, in a dazed manner, while she sank back upon the coats with a long sighing breath.

One hand still clasped in hers, the other arm passed under her head for a pillow, he remained upon the ground by her side. The turmoil of his own spirit seemed unaccountably soothed. Though never sleeping, a comforting drowsy numbness replaced the sharp suffering of his mind.

But when the early light of dawn pierced through the aperture, it brought with it the remembrance of a man's hand-clasp, the trust in one honest brown eye, the shade in place of the other.

The wonderful peace which seemed to have descended upon the little hut, lulling his mind, filling it, during those hours of close protection and companionship, with something exquisitely beautiful, albeit incomprehensible, was shattered at one blow.

He half-withdrew his arm; then, pausing, bent over the sleeping girl and looked long upon the delicate features, the sensitive lips and dark lashes. As he looked, an unbidden thought flitted across his mind, bringing a slow flush into his face. Had another taken indisputable possession? Had he reached to the very depths of her soul; freed all the deepest fibers of her womanhood?

He drew himself up, gently freeing his hand and arm. The question opened vistas down which he refused to look. A part of his nature that night had been illuminated as if by many-hued candles; and he felt dazed, strange to himself, almost, for once, afraid.

He rose with difficulty, his limbs cramped after long sitting; stretched his arms; looked down once more upon the sleeping form confident of his protection.

Croft was a lover of cleanliness, fair play, victory always—but victory with honor. Throwing back his head in a characteristic way, his eyes still resting upon the sleeping face, he smiled. It was the little smile which many men knew well, which enemies feared, but which those he led had ever loved to see: that smile which him meant a challenge, and a challenge presaging achievement.

Noislessly, he opened the door and went out. Seizing two old basins discovered among the rubbish in the hut, he strode toward the river.

Save for the distant surf, no sound was audible. From the palm grove he keenly surveyed the bay; it was deserted; the world might have been dead. Plunging through the tall bamboo he came out upon the deepened stretch of water glimmering faintly, like moving darkness, below him. Then, throwing off his garments, he dove into the shadowy ripples, feeling a primitive delight in the cold sting to his tired limbs. Afterward, slipping into his shirt and breeches, he filled his basins and returned to the grove.

When he emerged from the bamboo, the sound of voices fell upon his ears. Hastily stepping back, he waited, listening intently. The voices came nearer, then receded toward the seaward outskirts of the palm grove.

Discovering the Dark Forms of Three Natives.

Croft took a few noiseless strides in their direction, soon discovering the dark forms of three natives among the trees. Soundlessly creeping in their wake, he hid again, close enough to hear their speech, while they paused at the top of the slope.

The man sets about doing things. The girl becomes hysterical. Will she be able to face real perils?

Ask Dad— See If He Knows

Father and mother are always thinking of your welfare—there isn't a thing within reason they wouldn't do for you.

But they may unknowingly have been risking your life every day.

When you are at dinner tonight with dad, ask him this question:

"Dad, is our school firesafe?"

Perhaps he won't be able to answer—he may not know.

Ask dad if he knows that somewhere in the country a schoolhouse burns every day. Ask him if he knows that one-third of all the schoolhouses in the country are nothing better than firetraps—maybe your school is one of them.

Of course dad knows that buildings can be built that will not burn. They are being built everywhere, every day.

If your school is firesafe, you're lucky. If it isn't, ask dad what he is going to do about it. You have a right to know.

The highest type of firesafe construction is concrete. Our illustrated booklet "Concrete Schoolhouses" contains a wealth of information on firesafe construction with which every parent ought to be familiar. Write today for your free copy.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Trade among Friends

No matter what some folks say to the contrary, there certainly is a lot of sentiment in business. Friendship, for instance, makes more satisfactory sales than all the cleverness and argument in the world.

You like to trade at a certain store—not because its counters are arranged in a scientific way, but because the folks who serve you are always friendly and helpful.

Just that very thing—FRIENDLY SERVICE—is the power that draws people together into communities like this, where everybody can enjoy the many benefits of neighborly cooperation.

And FRIENDLY SERVICE is the sentimental reason why you find it very much to your advantage to trade with our advertisers—to buy where you feel at home, where your friends will see that you are well satisfied.

OUR PROSPERITY AND GROWTH DEPENDS UP ON CO-OPERATION

The readers of the News-Bulletin are requested to read carefully the cartoon in the corner of this page and also to look over the advertisements in the News-Bulletin. The reason we are running this cartoon and page of advertisements, is for the purpose of bringing to the attention of our readers one of the most important questions affecting the present and future welfare of this community. This page will be run in four continuous issues, each page containing a different cartoon dealing with community interests. This page has been made possible by the firms whose advertisements appear upon it and they join with the News-Bulletin in bringing to your attention the great question of community interest.

Oak Lawn people should be firm believers in trading at home, because community interest can best be served by co-operation between the citizens and the business institutions. We are fully aware that the evil of sending large sums of money out of the city for things obtainable in this city, is not confined to working people alone and the articles that will appear in this space for the next four weeks will deal with the various phases of the subject.

We are aware of the fact that Oak Lawn has many possibilities for growth and that it is a fine city in which to live. We are all aware that sincere co-operation is needed from every citizen and consistency in buying and selling.

Oak Lawn can only prosper from her own activities and these activities must be fostered and encouraged by the people of Oak Lawn, and we believe that the first step in this direction lays in doing all of our business possible in our own city. To our readers we say, you can help Oak Lawn and her institutions by boosting this trade-at-home campaign.

In the following issues we will deal with several important matters affecting the prosperity of Oak Lawn.
